MARVIN: The things that drives me every day as a dad, is him. His real name is Darion, we call him DeDe for short.

Every day he is hungry for something. Whether its affection, attention, knowledge.

And there is this huge responsibility of making sure that, when he is no longer under my wing, that he is a good person.

I think the advice I would give is you don't need to know all the answers. The craziest thing was believing that your dad knew everything. So as a dad you felt like you had to know everything, you had to get everything right. It's ok to make mistakes. Just do it from the right place. As long as it's coming from love, then, you know, it kinda starts to work itself out.
