

[Music]

[MONTAGE OF PHOTOGRAPHS OF HOWARD WITH HIS DAD WHEN HE WAS YOUNG]

[MONTAGE OF HOWARD WITH HIS OWN SON]

[MONTAGE OF HOWARD AND HIS SON AT A RESTAURANT]

[HOWARD:] My mom and dad were traditional Asian parents. My father would go to work before I woke up in the morning, and then he would come home too tired to play with me.

I tell my son "I love you" every single day.

[HOWARD (to son):] I love you.

[MOM:] Awwwwwww

[HOWARD:] My dad has never said that to me. Not because he doesn't love me, but because culturally, it's uncomfortable for him.

So, I teased him the other day and I said, "How come you never say that to me?"

And he said, "you're too old now."

Now that he is a grandfather, he says I love you to my son every time he sees him. My advice to all the fathers out there, forget the material things, forget the cultural restrictions, they grow up way too fast for you to waste even a single precious minute or moment.

[NEVER STOP BEING A DAD]

[MOM:] Say bye, bye.

[BABY:] Bye, bye.

[Music]

[#DADICATION]